INDEX

TO THE

SIXTH VOLUME OF THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN REVIEW;

OR,

EUROPEAN QUARTERLY JOURNAL.

A.

Abelard and Eloise, 15.
Alps and Pyrenees, a comparison between the scenery of the, 62.
Andorre, the little republic of, a political phænomenon, 69.
Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, character of, 37.
Artisans, on the education of, 76.
Artists and writers on art (British), 610; Sir Joshua Reynolds, 613; Hazlitt, 615; Barry and Opie, 622; Benjamin West, 627; Burnet, 631; Charles Lamb, 633; Hogarth, 635; Flaxman, 636; Milman, 640; Sir R. Westmacott, 641; Sir Thomas Lawrence, ib.; Sir M. A. Shee, 643; Fuseli, 647; Northcote, 649; writers and works on art, 650.
Arts and manufactures, Report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on, 76; the state of art, 77; importance of cultivating a taste for art, 78; on the education of artisans, 79; the people virtually excluded from Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's, 85; importance of cheap works of art, 84, 86; on copyright and fiscal duties, 87; expediency of academies for the promotion of the arts, 88; the Royal Academy, ib.; the new National Gallery, 90; the cultivation of the arts should be promoted as a national pursuit, 92.
Australia: Correspondence between the Colonial Secretary and the Governors of the Australian Colonies respecting Emigration, 472; an Act to empower His Majesty to erect South Australia a British Province, ib.; Colonization of, by R. Torrens, ib.; First Report of the South Australian and Colonization Commissioners to the Colonial Secretary, ib.; South Australian settlement, the first scheme of colonization to which sound principles of political economy and deductions from past experience have been attempted to be applied, 494.
Austria: Mrs. Trollope's Vienna and the Austrians, 657.

B.

Bacon (Lord Chancellor), 575, 581, 582, 585.
Barry, remarks on the lectures of, 622.
Bench and the bar: origin, constitution, and peculiar powers of the superior courts, 214; sketches of character, Erskine, 219; Gibbs, ib.; Lord Ellenborough, 220; Baron Graham, 221; Lord Eldon, ib.; Lord Brougham, 223; Lord Lyndhurst, 225; Chief Justice Tindal, 226; Mr. Justice Park, 227; Mr. Justice Williams, 228; Sir Robert Rolfe, Sir W. Follet and Mr. Fitzroy Kelly, 229; Mr. Thessiger, Mr. Wightman, and Mr. V. Richards, 230; Sir John Campbell, 231.

Bentham (Jeremy), 565.
Brougham (Lord), sketch of his judicial character, 223.
Buonaparte's letter to Tippoo Sultaun, 194.
Burnet, remarks on his writings on painting, 631.

C.

Calvin (Jean), character of, 144.
Campbell (Sir John), 231.
Catholicism, its present position, 420; Catholicism and Protestantism, to be viewed as essentially different principles, 421; Exeter Hall meetings, 422; remarkable approximation between the doctrines of certain orthodox divines and those of the Church of Rome, 423; Mr. Gordon's pamphlet, 424; elasticity of the Church of Rome accounted for, 425; remarks on the province of right reason in religion, 426; Dr. Wiseman's lectures, 428; a theological novel, 432.
Chesney's (Col.) steam expedition on the Euphrates, 235.
Clive (Lord), character of, 169.
Coal-mines: the adoption of the pneumatic engine recommended, 686.
Coke (Sir Edw.), the life of, 564.
Colonization, British, 472; colonization, a natural remedy, 473; the relative rights and duties between the parent country and a colony, 475; how can men of capital and intelligence best advance their prosperity upon uncultivated lands, 478; the best system adopted for disposing of waste lands that of the United States, 479; the plans adopted in British colonies, 480; Canada Company, 484; in 1831 an entirely new æra in the British colonies commenced, 485; the new regulations for disposing of wild lands founded upon the plan of the United States, ib.; the colony of New South Wales founded in 1788, 487; Van Diemen's Land in 1803, 488; Sir Thomas Brisbane's regulations for the disposal of land, 488; the government of Australia an absolute despotism, 490; causes of the prosperity of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, 491; emigration, to be useful, must meet the wants of the colonists, 493; absurdity of the Dutch regulations for the disposal of land, ib.; the new colony in Southern Australia, 494; brief outline of the South Australian Act, 495; Mr. Wakefield's principles of colonization, 497; First Report of the South Australian Commission, 500.
Commercial relations between England and Poland, 505.
Cornwallis (Lord), his administration in India, 169.
Cretan labyrinth, 543.
Crete, Pashley's Travels in, 540; the Cretan labyrinth, and the tomb of Zeus, 543; colonial policy of Venice, 544; the desolation occasioned by the Greek revolution in 1821, 546; its population, 547; peculiarities in manners, 548; description of the hut of a Greek Papás, 549; the dress of the Cretan mountaineers, 550; interesting observations on the Cretan dames, ib.; love songs, 552; their love of country, 553; vengeance takes the place of law, ib.; superstitions of the island 554.

D.

Dante, his influence upon the language and literature of Italy, 17.
Dublin (Archbishop of), 213.

E.

Education of artisans, 76.
Eldon (Lord), his judicial character, 221.
Elections, contested, French machinery for trying them, 712.
Elizabeth (Queen), some remarks on the leading men of the reign of, 577.
Ellenborough (Lord), 220.
England and Poland, their commercial relations, 505.

Erasmus and Luther, a parallel drawn between, 33.
Euphrates, Col. Chesney's steam expedition on the, 235; inquiry into the inducements to prosecute the steam navigation of, 251; the general products of the countries, 256; the imports, 257; the policy of Russia, 262; the East India Company's packets between Suez and Bombay, 265.
Exeter (Bishop of), 213.

F.

Flaxman's Lectures on Sculpture, 636.
Follet (Sir William), 229.
Fuseli, remarks on the writings of, 647.
French election committees: examination of the machinery for trying contested returns, 712.
French elections, on the recent, 371.

G.

Gebel Acra (Pliny's wonder), its height, 241.
Geneva, history of, 122; sketch of its primitive constitution, 129; the code of Adhemar, 133; romantic career of Amé VIII., 136; loss of its fairs, 140; Besançon Hugues, 141; the Reformation, 142; Calvin, 144; Catholic crusade against Protestantism, 149; constitution of Geneva, 151; overtures of the Swiss Cantons to join the League, 152; the struggle between the aristocratic councils of Geneva, supported by French Ministers against the citizens, 153; character of Rousseau, 154; united to the French Republic in 1798, 156; the restoration of the republic, 157.
Geraldine, a theological novel, 432.
Gibbs (Attorney-General), sketch of the judicial character of, 219.
Gordon (H.). The present State of the Controversy between the Protestant and Roman Catholic Churches, 420.
Graham (Mr. Baron), 221.
Gray, Mitford's edition of the works of, 397; some remarks on the poetry of the 18th century, 398; his general character, 401, 419; method of composition, 408; influence upon English poetry, 410.

H.

Hague's pneumatic transfer of power, 685.
Hallam's (H.) Introduction to the Literature of Europe, 1.
Hanover: the two letters-patent of King Ernest, 269; its constitution, 270; the causes which produced the opposition of the German Courts, 273; the motives which lurk under the foolish action of King Ernest, 281; under Napoleon, Germany consisted of three states, ib.; the constitution of Germany before the French Revolution, 282; the present kingdom of Hanover made up of a number of states, 283; George IV. seized upon all lands which before 1804 had been the public property of sovereign states, 284; the nature of this injustice, ib.; the edict of organization of 7th Dec. 1819, 289; the assembly of 1821, ib.; the two sons of the Duke of Brunswick, 291; George IV. arrogated to himself the tutorship, ib.; Mr. Prince, 292; M. Schmidt Phiseldeck, ib.; system of education devised for the two princes, ib.; Prince Metternich, and perfidy of the Austrian court, 295; the constitution awarded by George IV. to Brunswick, 299; insurrection in Göttingen, 304; Count Münster, 305; the letters-patent of the 1st of November, 306, 318; the Diet, 308; the proclamation of Young Germany, 313; the letters-patent of 1819, 324; the policy of Prince Metternich, 327, 331; the policy of Prussia, 329; the university professors the most powerful aristocracy of Germany, 333; the protest of the professors, ib.; composition of the two chambers, 335.
Hastings (Warren), his character as Governor-General of India, 169.
Hazlitt's Essay on certain inconsistencies in Sir Joshua Reynolds's Discourses, remarks on, 615.

Hogarth's works, remarks on, 635.
House of Commons, Random Recollections of, 209; sketches of Mr. Croker, 210; Sir R. Peel, 211; Mr. Goulbourn, Lord Stanley, Lord John Russell, Mr. O'Connell, Mr. H. Grattan, Mr. Ruthven, 212; the Irish Liberals, ib.; Mr. E. L. Bulwer, ib.; Dr. Bowring, 213.
House of Lords, Random Recollections of, 213; Archbishop of Dublin, Bishop of Exeter, and Lord Brougham, 213.
Hugo's (Victor) poems,—Les Voix Intérieures, 439.

I.

India: progress of British power, 160; Mr. Mill's history, 161; progress of Europeans, 163; French and English power nearly balanced, 164; Labourdonnais and Dupleix, ib.; Lord Clive, ib.; difficulties of governing India, 165; testimony in favour of the East India Company's government, 166; character of the sovereign authority, 167; survey of the administration of Clive, 168; of Warren Hastings, 169; of Lord Cornwallis, ib.; on the Indian tenures of land, 170; failure of Lord Cornwallis's law reforms, 172; administration of the Marquess Wellesley, 176, 206; remarks on his style of writing, 176; his letter to Sir J. H. Craig, 178; his letter to the Hon. F. North, 180; policy of the wars in which he engaged, 183, 195; the war with Tippoo Sultaun, 184; Buonaparte's letter to Tippoo, 194; the Mahratta war, 195; treaty of Bassein, ib.; Hon. Arthur Wellesley, (now the Duke of Wellington,) the first display of his military genius, 203; the noble simplicity of his description of the battle of Argaum, 204; his letter relative to his promotion to the rank of major-general, 207; steam navigation of the Euphrates, 235.
Ireland, a poor-law for, 338; the law of settlement, 341; out-door relief, 343; examination of the arguments of the opponents of the Bill, 344; the proposition, that the poor have no natural right to any support at the public charge, 344; the condition of the peasantry deteriorated since 1779, 349; effects of absenteeism, ib.; objections to poor-laws, 353; the Act of Elizabeth, 355; error of considering its population very far beyond that of England, 359; extent of destitution, 361; poor-laws on the workhouse principle, 364; plan of affording relief by way of loans, 367.
Italy, the last of the countries where Latin had been spoken to possess a language and literature of its own, 17; its national character mainly indebted to Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio, ib.

J.

James I., some remarks on the character of, 579.
Johnson's (C. W.) Life of Sir Edward Coke, 564.
Jonson (Ben), 410.
Judicial character, sketches of, 219.

K.

Kelly (Fitzroy), 229.

L.

Lamb's (Charles) writings on art, observations on, 633.
Lawrence (Sir Thomas), 641.
Lawyer, an attempt to analyse the mind of a, and thence to deduce some conclusions respecting his relation to government and legislation, and his consequent influence upon the condition of the community to which he belongs, 564.
Literature of the Middle Ages, 1; literary history belongs to modern times, 2; modern literature, not a simple term, 5; indifference to early German and Anglo-Saxon poetry, 6; the Teutonic mythology the cause, 6; the germ of literature preserved in the church, 8; the seventh century the nadir of the human mind, 8; state of literature in the dark ages, 10; beneficial effects of retaining the Latin tongue, 12; progress of literature in the twelfth century, 13; Abelard and Eloise, 15; existence of a national literature in seven European languages in 1400, 16; antiquity of the Portuguese as a cultivated language, 17; Italy the last to possess a language and literature of its own, ib.; Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio, ib.; revival of Greek learning in the West, 21; Lorenzo, 25; John Picus of Mirandola, 27; the Reformation, 31; Luther and Erasmus, 32; Ariosto, 36; political philosophy of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, 41; character of Machiavel, 42.

Lorenzo's villa at Fiesole, description of the prospect from, 25.

Luther and Erasmus, a parallel drawn between, 33.

Lyndhurst (Lord), sketch of his judicial character, 225.

M.

Machiavel (Nicholas), character of, 42.

Mahratta war, the policy of, 195.

Martin (J.), his genius-conceived plan for the drainage of the metropolis, 687.

Martin (M.). The Despatches, Minutes and Correspondence of the Marquess Wellesley during his administration in India, 160.

Mechanics, prospective changes in, 679.

Middle Ages, literature of the, 1.

Milman's Estimate of Sculpture and Painting, remarks on, 640.

Mitford's (Rev. John) edition of the works of Gray, 397.

Murray's (Hon. J. E.) Summer in the Pyrenees, 46, 63.

O.

Opie, observations on the writings of, 622.

Oxford University, the intellectual and literary state of, 97.

P.

Park (Mr. Justice Allan), sketch of his judicial character, 227.

Pashley's (R.) travels in Crete, 540.

Peel (Sir Robert), 211.

Petrarch, his services in the restoration of literature, 19.

Picus (John) of Mirandola, account of, 27.

Pneumatic engine, Hague's, 685.

Poetry: Ariosto's Orlando, 37; the works of Gray, 397; Victor Hugo's poems, Les Voix Intérieures, 439.

Poland and England, the commercial relations between, 505.

Polite letters, Petrarch the first real restorer of, 19.

Political philosophy in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, 41.

Poor-law for Ireland, 338.

Portuguese, as a cultivated language, antiquity of the, 17.

Pyrenees, tourists in the, 46; the two Bagnères, de Bigorre and de Luchon, and Cauteretz, the most fashionable watering places, 51; Barèges, ib.; the Landes of Gascony, 54; description of the inhabitants of Béarn, 56; customs and superstitions, 57; Cauteretz, 59; the Grange de la Reine, 60; contrasted simplicity of the muleteers and shepherds, ib.; observations on the inhabitants in general, 61; the scenery of the Pyrenees and the Alps compared, 62; account of the little republic of Andorre, 69.

R.

Railroads, observations on, 691.

Report from the Select Committee on Arts and Manufactures, 76.

Report of a Select Committee of the House of Commons, on the disposal of lands in the British colonies, 472.

Report (first) of the South Australian and Colonization Commissioners to the Colonial Secretary, 472.

Reynolds (Sir Joshua), remarks on the Discourses of, 613.

Richards (Vaughan), 230.

Rolfe (Sir Robert), 229.

Rousseau (Jean Jacques), on the character of, 154.

S.

Shee (Sir M. A.), 643.
Sketches in the Pyrenees, by the author of Slight Reminiscences of the Rhine, 46.
Steam carriages on common roads, 699.
Steam navigation of the Euphrates, 235.
Steam navigation, observations on, 703.
Superstitions of the island of Crete, 554.

T.

Thessiger (Mr.), 230.
Thourel's Histoire de Genève, depuis son origin jusqu'à nos jours, 122.
Tindal (Chief Justice), 226.
Tippoo Sultaun, reasons for the war with, 184; his letters, 191.
Torrens (R.), on the colonization of South Australia, 472.

U.

University of Oxford, the intellectual and literary state of, 97.

V.

Vienna and the Austrians, by Frances Trollope, 657.
Virgil, 409, 410.
Voltaic battery, or electro-magnetism, its application as a primary power, 690.

W.

Wellesley (Marquess), his administration in India, 176.
Wellington (Duke of), the first display of his military genius, 203; his simplicity, brevity and straightforwardness, ib.; his description of the battle of Argaum, 204; his letter relative to his promotion to the rank of major-general, 207.
West's (Benjamin) Discourses, remarks on, 627.
Williams (Mr. Justice), 228.
Wiseman (Dr.), lectures on the principal doctrines and practices of the Catholic Church, 428.

Z.

Zeus, the tomb of, 543.

END OF THE SIXTH VOLUME.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY RICHARD AND JOHN E. TAYLOR, RED LION COURT, FLEET STREET.